Hello,
My name is

Of Names and Licenses
Doctors wishing to use a name other than what is on their license must obtain a Fictitious Name Permit from the Medical Board of California.

A little honesty can go a long way in nurturing the patient-doctor relationship. Not only is this true when talking to patients about their health, but also true with the name that doctors use to practice medicine.

In fact, it is the law.

With limited exceptions (see Business and Professions Code section 2285), a physician and surgeon or podiatrist must practice using the name on his or her medical license or get a Fictitious Name Permit, which allows them to practice medicine under a different name.

Laws relating to these topics are designed to protect the public by minimizing the likelihood that health care consumers get confused or misled about their treating physicians.

Name Changes
All name changes must be reported to the Medical Board of California (Board) within 30 days. The doctor must provide both the old and new names.

In this edition of the Medical Board of California’s (Board) newsletter, newly elected Board President Denise Pines outlines her vision for the Board and how she hopes to achieve it. Please see page 3.

If you are a physician or a licensed midwife, please be aware that you may be audited and asked to prove that your required continuing medical education (CME), or continuing education (CE) for midwives, credits are acceptable and have been completed on schedule. The Board audits of CME and CE credits are increasing, effective immediately. Additional information is on page 11.

Last year, about 80,000 Americans died and some 900,000 were hospitalized due to influenza. Uncountable others missed school and work and suffered through prolonged misery. Yet fewer than half of the population gets vaccinated annually against influenza. What can you do to change this? Please see page 9.

One of the oldest medical societies in California has come up with a fresh new approach to heading off physician burnout. Called Joy of Medicine, it offers ways to find more joy in a profession characterized by high stress and ever-increasing workload. Learn more on page 12.

California physicians are required by law to report pesticide-caused illnesses to state and local agencies. Free online continuing medical education courses provide information about these illnesses and how to report them. Please see page 16.
It is an honor to be elected as the president of the Medical Board of California (Board). Concurrently, I recognize what tremendous responsibility this role entails. The Board members and the Board’s staff are often called upon to do things that are uncomfortable, and I think that is a good thing.

When we are uncomfortable, we must think outside the box and open ourselves to new perspectives, and ultimately, I believe, find our way to new solutions.

As the Board begins this new term, I will take a “Consumers First” approach and will challenge the Board’s staff with the question: “If you are living the mission, what would you do better?”

I will challenge them to identify areas in which the Board can improve and, perhaps more important, come up with creative solutions.

We will shift our “Check Up on Your Doctor’s License” from a campaign to an initiative. We will strive to include a broader range of partners in our outreach efforts and we will commit to transparency in all our interactions with legislators, licensees and consumers.

Five years ago, our team’s targeted outreach efforts began with teleconferencing. We will continue to expand those efforts, utilizing technological enhancements in everything from our web platforms to the license alert app.

We will work with stakeholders to identify areas in which we can improve the Board’s vital licensing and enforcement functions, including reducing enforcement timelines.

Earlier this year we celebrated the passing of the Patient Notification Bill and the mandatory consultation of CURES. We have achieved much, and we have more to do. I look forward to working alongside my fellow Board members to implement a physician’s health program and explore more ways in which we can combat the opioid epidemic gripping the nation.

You have a very strong team working for you. Our commitment is demonstrated by the fact that 90 percent of our current Board members will remain on the Board for the next two years, and I look forward to working with my fellow Board members and the Board’s staff to strengthen and enhance consumer protection in California.

Physicians with an email address are required to report it to the Medical Board? The email address shall be considered confidential and not subject to public disclosure.
Below are a few situations the Board is questioned about frequently. Please note that no names used in this article refer to actual doctors. The names were invented to illustrate the concepts.

- Legal Name Change: Dr. Anne Kathryn Anders (the name on her medical license) cannot practice as Kathryn Anders, even if that is the name she is known by and commonly uses. To do so, she must legally change her name and present evidence -- including a current government-issued photo identification like a driver’s license, alien registration or passport and a certified court order, marriage certificate, or dissolution of marriage -- to the Board showing that her new legal name is Kathryn Anders. The Board would then change the name on her medical license to Kathryn Anders.

- Nickname: A physician cannot change his or her name by making it shorter or easier to spell or pronounce without going through the legal name change process.

- Marriage Change: A physician who legally changes his or her name upon marriage cannot continue practicing under the original name on his or her license. The physician must present evidence to the Board of the legal name change so the Board can change the name on the physician’s license to match the newly-adopted legal name. The same is true for a couple adopting a hyphenated last name at marriage.

For example, if Dr. June Jones marries Ruth Wright, becoming June Jones-Wright, she must go through the legal name change process and present evidence of that change to the Board, which will change the name on her license.

There is no charge to change a physician’s name on a license. However, a new wall certificate or wallet license will not automatically be issued following a name change. To receive a new wall certificate or wallet license reflecting the name change, a physician must fill out an Application for Duplicate Certificate and submit it with appropriate fees.

Fictitious Name Permits
A physician and surgeon or podiatrist practicing medicine under a name other than his or her own name must obtain a Fictitious Name Permit (FNP) from the Board. The FNP address must be in California.

On the form, applicants for an FNP are asked to supply three fictitious name choices, yet many supply only one. If that one name is not available because it has been taken by someone else or is too similar to one that is taken, it slows down the application process. Physicians are encouraged to submit three choices, and to avoid very common names.

How can you tell if a name has already been taken by someone else?

Use the Board’s website to check if the name is available. Go to www.mbc.ca.gov, click on license search. Scroll down below the blue block until you see several categories, then click on Fictitious Name Permit. Under Business Name, type in the business name you would like for your FNP, i.e. “XYZ Clinic.” If no results match the search criteria, that name may be available. However, while paperwork is being processed, someone else could take that name, or the name could be deemed too similar to an existing FNP. Therefore, FNP applicants are encouraged to submit two alternate names.

Please note that you cannot use your FNP before it is approved by the Board. Applicants may practice, but cannot do any advertising, create any signage, or print business cards or other materials until the name on their FNP is approved by the Board. Please note that registering a corporation name with the Secretary of State’s office does not in any way guarantee that an applicant will be able to use that name on an FNP. On a related issue, the FNP does not have to match the corporation name registered with the Secretary of State.

Other FNP facts:
• FNP s are not transferable. If Dr. Smith sells her business, the FNP does not transfer to the new owner. The FNP needs to be canceled and the new owner must submit a new application. For a smooth transition, the Board recommends submitting the cancelation form and the new application together.
• A licensed physician or group of licensed physicians must own the FNP and 51 percent of the professional medical corporation organized pursuant to the Moscone-Knox Professional Corporation Act (Corporations Code section 13400 et. seq.)
• A lay person cannot have an FNP for a medical practice; neither can a limited liability company (LLC). If the FNP is owned by more than one physician, and one of them wants to disassociate himself or herself from the practice, the physician must fill out and sign an FNP Notification of Partnership Change. An FNP Notification of Shareholder Change must be used to add or delete shareholders.
• If one of the physician partners/shareholders dies, a death certificate must be presented to the Board to make necessary changes to the FNP.
• A change of address for an FNP must be filed with the Board within 30 days after the business moves and the address must be in California.
• It takes approximately four weeks to get an FNP approved, assuming that the application form is filled out correctly and includes all required documentation, such as an endorsed copy of the Articles of Incorporation from the Secretary of State’s office and a check for the $50 processing fee made out to Medical Board of California.
• When using your approved FNP, you must use it exactly as it appears on your approved application in advertising, on business cards and other materials that you issue.

All forms related to FNPs can be found on the Board’s website, www.mbc.ca.gov and other useful information is available at www.mbc.ca.gov/Applicants/Fictitious_Name/.
Truckee Doctor Receives STLRP Award

Ahrin Koppel had an idyllic childhood in the small San Bernadino-area town of Apple Valley. The youngest of three children, she was raised on a six-acre property with dogs, cats, horses, goats and chickens. Her mother was a judge and her father was a salesman.

“I grew up completely unaware of the gender inequality that exists in our culture. My parents told me I could be and do anything I wished, so I did,” she said.

Her favorite subject in school was math. The idea of becoming a doctor came to her when she was asked to select a major on her University of California application form.

“My mother was helping me and she said, ‘You should become a doctor. You can help other people and always have a job.’ I said ‘OK’ and chose biology. It wasn’t until much later that I realized that what I thought to be a flippant comment from my mother would slowly seep into my consciousness over the next several years and further define my path,” she said.

She left for the University of California, Santa Barbara in September 1993. Two months later, while he was away from home on a business trip, her father suffered a sudden cardiac death.

With her father’s death occupying her mind, the future Dr. Koppel’s grades began to slip.

She decided to move closer to home, “and to a school where the culture was more heavily weighted..."
towards pre-medical studies.” She transferred to the University of California Los Angeles (UCLA) for her third and fourth years of college, and later earned a medical degree at Tel Aviv University in Israel. Dr. Koppel returned to Southern California, where she completed her internal medicine internship and residency at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center and her fellowship in hematology and oncology at UCLA.

Dr. Koppel works at Tahoe Forest Cancer Center in Truckee, a 25-bed critical access hospital located in rural Nevada County near ski areas such as Squaw Valley and Northstar California Resort. The facility serves a local population of about 35,000 and an additional 25,000 in outlying areas up to 100 miles distant. Tahoe Forest offers “the full complement of outpatient medical oncology and radiation oncology services that one would expect from any community program,” she says. The hospital’s technology and its association with the University of California Davis saves cancer patients from Truckee and five surrounding counties in California and Nevada from having to travel hundreds of miles for consultation and treatment.

Her day starts with a team huddle with two other physicians, three nurses, a nurse navigator, front office staff, a phlebotomist, a nutritionist, and members of the psychosocial team. “Anyone planning to come in contact with our patients that day joins in on this important discussion to share relevant information on each patient scheduled,” she said. Next, she sees patients in the exam room or the infusion room.

“Each day at noon, we participate in a virtual tumor board with UC Davis,” Dr. Koppel said. “This interactive meeting is broadcast to the network sites and, in turn, our video and audio is broadcast to them. I can present difficult cases to the group, get real time feedback, and carry out the plan as the patient’s treating physician within our local community. This technology also gives the rural practitioner the chance to evaluate clinical trial opportunities and keep up to date on the latest advances in cancer treatment. The unifying goal is ensuring quality community-based care for cancer patients.”

Her favorite part of the job “is having the opportunity to offer the highest quality care, which translates into a superb patient experience. For some, cancer has turned into a chronic condition. For most, cancer is the biggest challenge they have ever faced. Working with a fantastic team allows me the chance to provide the best possible care,” she said.

Asks if she has any advice for young people who want to be doctors, she said, “My message to anyone wanting to pursue a career in medicine is to persevere through all the roadblocks and naysayers. These obstacles are life themes in general. They are meant to be overcome. Don’t let obstacles deter you from your goals.”

How did she feel when she learned she had won a Steven M. Thompson loan repayment grant?

“Winning the award made me feel very proud to be part of our rural medical community, where the opportunity to make a difference locally is tangible. The whole community is dedicated to improving access to medical care close to home, and being recognized for that commitment feels great,” she said.

Dr. Koppel and her husband have four daughters. The first was born in August of 2012, followed by triplets the following year.

“Today, our older daughter is six, and the triplets are four,” she said. “Some days it seems like we have four Tasmanian devils, but most days they are the light of our lives.”

In her spare time, Dr. Koppel enjoys camping, hiking, yoga, and meditation.

In 1918, a deadly influenza pandemic circled the globe, killing an estimated 675,000 Americans and more than 50 million people worldwide. Infection rates are highest among those over the age of 65, and children under the age of two years, and individuals of any age with medical conditions which confer increased risk.

Despite development of effective vaccines during the intervening 100 years, influenza is still killing people. During the 2017-2018 season, about 80,000 Americans died, according to the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC). The California Department of Public Health (CDPH) has already reported the first California influenza death for the 2018-2019 flu season, which began October 1, 2018.

More than 900,000 Americans were hospitalized with influenza during the 2017-2018 season, the CDC estimates. Yet fewer than half of Americans were vaccinated against influenza last year.

This is where you come in. By encouraging your patients and your staff to get vaccinated, you can stop this potentially deadly disease from spreading.

Health Care Workers

California state law (Health and Safety Code section 1288.7) requires general acute care hospitals to offer free influenza vaccine to all employees and require them to get vaccinated or sign a statement declining the vaccine. Many county health officers have ordered all health care workers in their counties, including office staff, to either get vaccinated or wear a mask during flu season.

Best Protection

“The best available protection is annual influenza vaccination for all patients age 6 months and older. Your strong influenza vaccine recommendation is one of the most important factors in patients accepting the vaccine,” the CDC said on a website for health care providers.

The flu season officially kicked off October 1, 2018. How long it lasts varies from year to year, but flu viruses sometimes circulate until May.

Children under 5 years old are at greatest risk for serious complications, according to the CDPH. Other high-risk groups include older adults, pregnant women, and people with weak immune systems and chronic disease.

“Most experts think that flu viruses spread mainly by droplets made when people with the flu cough, sneeze or talk,” the CDC said. Those infected are contagious from one day before symptoms develop until about seven days after symptoms – cough, sore throat, runny or stuffy nose, headaches, body aches, fatigue, chills, and sometimes fever, vomiting and diarrhea – appear.

Frequent hand washing and coughing into a tissue or a sleeve can help prevent the spread of influenza.

It takes about two weeks after getting a flu shot to develop immune protection.
What is New this Year with the Flu Shot?

- Nasal spray flu vaccine (live attenuated influenza vaccine or LAIV) is approved for use in non-pregnant individuals age 2-49, if they do not have certain underlying medical conditions. All LAIV vaccines are quadrivalent (four component – protecting against four strains), as are most other vaccines available for the 2018-2019 flu season.
- Two standard dose flu shots (Afluria [a trivalent vaccine] and Afluria Quadrivalent) can be given to people aged 18-64 years with a jet injector instead of with a needle. A jet injector uses compressed gas or springs to penetrate the skin with a high pressure narrow stream of fluid rather than using a hypodermic needle.
- High-dose shots, containing four times the amount of antigen contained in regular flu shots, are available for adults 65 and older. “A higher dose of antigen in the vaccine is supposed to give older people a better immune response and, therefore, better protection against flu,” the CDC said.
- About 80 percent of vaccines used this season will be thimerosal-free (i.e. preservative free).

Medical Board Increasing CME and CE Compliance Audits

The Medical Board of California’s (Board) Licensing Program has announced that the number of audits conducted for continuing medical education (CME) compliance by physicians and continuing education (CE) compliance by licensed midwives is increasing from 1 percent to 10 percent, effective immediately. Recent streamlining within the Licensing Program has allowed the Board to allocate staff resources for increased CME and CE auditing.

Under California law, physicians (including special faculty permit holders) must complete at least 50 hours of approved CME during each biennial renewal cycle. Licensed midwives must complete 36 hours of approved CE in each two-year renewal cycle.

The CME/CE requirements were put in place to ensure that licensees keep up with current medical knowledge.

In order to make sure licensees are complying with continuing education requirements, the Board is required by law to audit a randomly selected group of physicians who have certified that they have complied with CME requirements by signing the CME certification statement on their license renewal notice. The Board must also audit a randomly selected group of licensed midwives who have signed the statement attesting to CE completion on their license renewal notice. Such audits occur monthly.

In addition to fulfilling CME or CE requirements, physicians and licensed midwives must maintain documentation of the CME and CE for a minimum of four years. These records must include the name of the participating physician or licensed midwife, course or program title, dates of attendance, number of credit hours received, and sponsoring/accrediting agency. Such records will be needed if the physician’s CME or the licensed midwife’s CE compliance is audited by the Licensing Program.

A physician who passes a certifying or recertifying examination administered by a recognized specialty board is granted 100 CME hours for four consecutive years.

A physician or licensed midwife who teaches or presents a course or program that meets the CME or CE requirement can acquire a maximum of one-third of required CME or CE hours.

Physicians may apply for CME hours or licensed midwives may apply for CE hours to be waived in cases of undue hardship, illness, or various kinds of military service. Use this form to apply for a waiver.

Physicians and licensed midwives do not need to provide the Board with CME or CE documentation when applying to renew a license unless they are audited.

If a physician or licensed midwife is audited by the Board and cannot document fulfillment of the CME or CE requirement, the Licensing Program will allow the physician or midwife to renew once and make up the deficient CME or CE hours. However, the Board will not renew a license a second time until all the required CME hours have been documented.

Under Section 1338(c) and 1379.28(c) of Title 16 of the California Code of Regulations, it is considered unprofessional conduct for any licensee or permit holder to misrepresent compliance with CME or CE requirements on the renewal form. Such misrepresentation may result in a citation and fine from the Board.

For more information about CME requirements, please visit the Board’s website at http://www.mbc.ca.gov/Licensees/Continuing_Education/.

For more information about CE requirements, please visit Section 1379.26 of Title 16 of the California Code of Regulations and Section 2518 of the California Business and Professions Code.
Practicing medicine is not easy. Practicing medicine is not easy. In fact, according to a national survey by the American Medical Association and the Mayo Clinic, more than half of the physicians in the United States report experiencing the symptoms of burnout, characterized by exhaustion, feelings of cynicism and lack of efficacy.

To combat burnout, the 150-year-old Sierra Sacramento Valley Medical Society (SSVMS) has established a program designed to help physicians return to the very reasons they began practicing medicine in the first place.

New Approach

Called “The Joy of Medicine,” the program was created with input from leaders of the big health care providers in the region (Sacramento, Yolo, Placer, and El Dorado counties) to avoid duplication of services already available to help physicians cope with, or avoid, burnout.

“Everything we provide is unique,” said Aileen Wetzel, chief executive officer of SSVMS. “We are hoping to get to physicians before they burn out. Most of them went into medicine as good Samaritans. Our program is trying to get to the root of why they began practicing medicine in the first place.”

Fifty physicians participated in a recent Joy of Medicine Paint & Sip night held in Folsom, Calif., on August 29. The physicians were given the opportunity to express themselves while enjoying collegiality, conversation and some wine. The Joy of Medicine Program assists physicians with combatting burnout by helping them find ways to return to the reasons they began practicing medicine in the first place. Courtesy photo.

Northern California Program Seeks the ‘Joy of Medicine’
Tools to Fight Burnout
The Joy of Medicine program offers each doctor practicing in the Sacramento region up to six “resiliency consultations” with licensed psychologists and life coaches. Physicians contact vetted providers directly to make appointments. The visits are completely anonymous and free – paid for by SSVMS through a grant from The Physicians’ Foundation, donations from medical groups, and ongoing fundraising by SSVMS.

Physician Peer Groups meet in communities such as Carmichael, Elk Grove, El Dorado Hills and Newcastle. These popular groups meet monthly in a local physician’s home to discuss shared issues and to socialize. One group recently made French pastries, while another painted landscapes. Some attendees may live close enough to be neighbors, but because they work for competing providers, they never met before joining a peer group.

Through its SPIRIT nonprofit program (SPIRIT is an acronym for Sacramento Physician Initiative to Reach out, Innovate and Teach), SSVMS gives doctors an opportunity to volunteer their services to people who do not have the means to see a doctor otherwise. For some physicians, this volunteer work is extremely rewarding, Wetzel said, and helps combat physician burnout.

SPIRIT matches patients referred by various agencies to volunteer physicians who donate outpatient surgery (such as hernia repair and cataract surgery) and specialty consultations. SPIRIT works with local health systems to facilitate the donation of supporting services and facilities. In 2017, 1,007 patients were treated, 57 surgeries were performed and 862 hours were donated, for an estimated total of $442,000 in donated medical care. SPIRIT is aimed at “people who have zero insurance coverage,” Wetzel said.

Finding the Joy
The second annual Joy of Medicine Summit, held recently, attracted over 200 physicians, each one eager to find more joy in a profession characterized by high stress and ever-increasing workload. The Summit featured a session called “Lightning Grand Rounds,” where physicians and medical students spent five minutes apiece describing what brings them joy. “This helps physicians discover that there is joy, and to see all the things that can bring joy,” Wetzel said. Data is being analyzed on a wellness survey taken across the entire medical community in SSVMS’s four county area. “We’re asking physicians what changes would help them improve patient care,” she said. She was encouraged by a 12 percent survey response rate.

Not Copyrighted
Wetzel says she spends a lot of time working with medical societies in other parts of California, as well as other states, on how to start their own similar programs. She tells them to help themselves to any part of the SSVMS Joy of Medicine program. None of it is copyrighted and she is happy to share. For more information, visit www.joyofmedicine.org.

Burnout Tied to Medical Errors
A study of 6,695 physicians found that 55 percent of them reported experiencing the symptoms of burnout, characterized by exhaustion, cynicism, and lack of efficacy, and 10.5 percent of them reported making at least one major medical error in the three months preceding the survey.

“We found that physicians with burnout had more than twice the odds of self-reported medical error, after adjusting for specialty, work hours, fatigue and work unit safety rating,” said Dr. Daniel Tawfik, M.D., lead author of the study, published in Mayo Clinic Proceedings. (The Becker’s Hospital Review, July 9, 2018)
Curbing Physician Suicide Rates by Changing the Culture of Medicine

By Peter Yellowlees, M.D., Professor of Psychiatry, University of California Davis

What do we know about physician suicide, and how can we prevent this tragedy?

Firstly, we know that physicians are at a higher risk for suicide than the general population. The Kaiser Family Foundation estimates that there are 968,000 active physicians in the U.S. in 2018. About 35-40 percent of them are female. The American Foundation for Suicide Prevention estimates that 300-400 U.S. physicians commit suicide each year, including about 150-200 of each gender. The total number is likely an underestimate as it is well known that some possible physician suicides end up not being recorded as such.

The suicide rate for female physicians in particular is markedly elevated, with a relative risk of 2.27 compared to U.S. women in general, while that of male physicians is also above the U.S. national average with a relative risk of 1.4. The fact that physicians are more likely to kill themselves than non-physician equivalent adults in the general population is hardly surprising, as physicians have the knowledge and skills to make sure that they are successful in a suicide attempt.

Secondly, we know that risk factors for suicide in the general population include major depression or other mood disorders, substance abuse, adverse life events, access to lethal means, medical illness, a family history of mental illness, age (50 or older), and gender (male more common overall). We also know that in their lifetime, approximately 15 percent of physicians will develop a substance use and/or a mental health-related condition (usually depression or anxiety) that could potentially impair their ability to practice medicine, and that 30-50 percent of physicians at some stage exhibit symptoms of burnout, which may lead to anxiety, depression or substance use disorders.

Thirdly, we know that physicians look after themselves inadequately. They rarely report depression or suicidal ideas, suffering in silence, or attempting to treat themselves, such as the stigma of psychiatric disorders, even among physicians. These behaviors are embedded in the medical subculture, which encourages denial and self-reliance, and are at least partly learned implicitly during training.

Why is this happening and what can we do? There are many possible interventions to reduce this tragedy. These range from the need for organizational and systemic work changes to reduce administrative requirements and tame electronic medical records to personal and lifestyle changes to aid resilience and reduce burnout, including learning how to better recognize at-risk colleagues. Some, like myself, argue that the Triple Aim of health care (improving the patient experience of care, including quality and satisfaction; improving the health of populations; and reducing the per capita cost of health care) should become the Quadruple Aim, with the fourth aim being improving the work life of health providers.

The National Academy of Medicine is very active in this field, and has set up an impressively well organized and resourced Action Collaborative on Clinician Wellbeing and Resilience (See https://nam.edu/initiatives/clinician-resilience-and-well-being ). This is an excellent website to visit for all interested in this topic. The American Medical Association, like several other colleges and professional associations, is also committed to this issue and has created five excellent modules in their online “steps forward” program on physician health and wellbeing that are replete with good practical examples of how to reduce levels of burnout and improve organizational and individual responses to stress.
The thread that runs through all of these endeavors is the realization that the medical profession, in its entirety, is under significant stress, and it is no longer appropriate to deny or ignore these pressures, as has happened in the past, because they are now so well-linked to impaired patient care outcomes. The health of physicians has finally become a patient safety issue, and the loss of hundreds of physicians per year to suicide can no longer be tolerated or ignored.

The profession of medicine is one of the most meaningful and important careers that it is possible for any individual to embark on. It is also a profession that is under intense pressure as physicians try to provide high quality care, as they have been trained to do, in environments increasingly driven by adverse business requirements focused on administrative needs. Some have even suggested that instead of using the term “burnout” we should be “talking about “moral injury.”

Unfortunately, as a profession we are trained to ignore ill health and distress in ourselves, and in our colleagues. We tend not to reach out for help when we need it. We need to change this set of inappropriate attitudes and incorporate the notion of self-care as an important professionalism issue in all our training as medical students onwards, and we need to keep focused on providing quality care despite business demands. After all, if we are not able to look after ourselves, how can we be expected to look after others?

As medical professionals, we need to take serious steps to change the culture and organization of our whole system of health care in order to improve physician health and wellbeing, and thereby reduce the number of our colleagues who kill themselves each year. (Editor’s note: Dr. Yellowlees is the author of “Physician Suicide: Cases and Commentaries,” published in June, 2018 by the American Psychiatric Association Publishing Inc.)

“The medical profession, in its entirety, is under significant stress, and it is no longer appropriate to deny or ignore these pressures.”

-Dr. Yellowlees
Over 200 million pounds of active ingredients in agricultural pesticides are applied annually in California. In 2015, 1,757 cases of pesticide illnesses and injuries were reported to local county health officials and state authorities. Since the 1970s, California physicians have been required by law to report pesticide illnesses to state and local agencies. It is important for physicians to know about pesticide illnesses and how to report them.

Timely and accurate reporting of pesticide illnesses helps regulators oversee state pesticide laws and regulations and identify the need for actions that might be needed to protect workers and the public.

The Office of Environmental Health Hazard Assessment (OEHHA) of the California Environmental Protection Agency is announcing the availability of its two recently revised free online one-hour courses that offer continuing medical education credits for physicians and other health care providers.

The courses are:

“Recognition, Management, and Reporting of Pesticide Illness”
This course informs physicians and other health care providers on how to diagnose and treat pesticide illnesses and California’s legal requirement to report pesticide illnesses.

“The California Medical Supervision Program”
The California Medical Supervision Program is a cholinesterase-monitoring surveillance program designed to protect certain pesticide handlers who work with the more toxic cholinesterase-inhibiting pesticides. This course is for physicians who currently are or would like to become medical supervisors in the Program.

These courses are available at https://mededpesticide.org/.

On-site, in-person presentations of these courses by OEHHA staff are also available and can be arranged by contacting the Pesticide and Environmental Toxicology Branch of OEHHA by phone at: (510) 622-3170 or by email at Pesticides@oehha.ca.gov.

Q: I have a patient I see every six months and have been prescribing a Schedule II-IV controlled substance. Do I still need to check CURES every four months?

A: Yes, unless there is another exemption as specified by law. Health and Safety Code section 11165.4 states: A health care practitioner authorized to prescribe, order, administer, or furnish a controlled substance shall consult the CURES database to review a patient’s controlled substance history before prescribing a Schedule II, Schedule III, or Schedule IV controlled substance to the patient for the first time and at least once every four months thereafter if the substance remains part of the patient’s treatment plan.

Q: I checked CURES and prescribed a Schedule II-IV controlled substance for my patient two months ago. Now I am prescribing another Schedule II-IV controlled substance. Do I need to check CURES again?

A. No. Health and Safety Code section 11165.4 defines the first time as the initial occurrence in which a health care practitioner, in his or her role as a health care practitioner, intends to prescribe, order, administer, or furnish a Schedule II, Schedule III, or Schedule IV controlled substance to a patient and has not previously prescribed a controlled substance to the patient. However, you may need to check CURES as part of the standard of care.

Q: I’m having problems logging into my CURES account. I can’t remember my login or password. Who do I contact to get that information reset?

A: The California Department of Justice (DOJ) oversees all technical issues with CURES. Contact the DOJ Help Desk at (916) 210-3187 or email cures@doj.ca.gov. If you still have problems, contact the Board at (800) 633-2322.

Measles on the Move
The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) reports that 220 people from 26 states, including California and the District of Columbia, reported getting measles as of November 3, 2018. In 2017, 120 U.S. measles cases were reported for the entire year. In 2015, a large measles outbreak was linked to Disneyland visitors.

California has confirmed 20 measles cases so far this year, according to the California Department of Public Health.

Symptoms of measles include a fever as high as 105 degrees, cough, runny nose, red eyes and a rash (usually starting on the face and spreading down the body). The rash occurs about 14 days after a person is exposed to measles. Patients are considered contagious from four days before to four days after the rash appears.

Measles is highly contagious. Unvaccinated travelers -- especially those returning from England, France, Germany, India, and the Philippines -- bring it back to the U.S. It is spread “by direct contact with infectious droplets or by airborne spread when an infected person breathes, coughs or sneezes. Measles virus can remain infectious in the air for up to two hours after an infected person leaves an area,” according to the CDC.

Vaccination is the best way to prevent the spread of measles, which can cause serious complications to infants and young children, pregnant women, people with compromised immune systems, and others.

Increase in Young Adults Dying of Cirrhosis
The number of Americans dying of alcoholic cirrhosis is growing, with a notable increase in those aged 25-34, according to a study published in The BMJ journal. This age group experienced average annual increases in cirrhosis-related mortality of 10.5 percent from 2009 to 2016. “White Americans and Native Americans experienced the most rapid increase in this age group,” according to the study. States showing the most rapid increases in annual percentage of deaths due to alcoholic cirrhosis included Louisiana, California, Kentucky, Delaware and New Mexico. The District of Columbia and Maryland showed improvements in alcoholic cirrhosis mortality.

Finding Early-Stage Alzheimer’s
A small study described in JAMA Ophthalmology used an eye exam to determine if subjects were at greater risk of developing Alzheimer’s disease (AD) before they showed any symptoms. The noninvasive test examined each participant’s retina and optic nerve using optical coherence tomographic angiography (OCTA), which shines light into an eye to measure retinal thickness. Researchers found that subjects who had biomarkers for AD had a larger-than-usual area in the center of their retinas without blood vessels and their retinas were much thinner than normal. Such a test for preclinical AD – if proved effective in larger studies -- could provide a faster, cheaper, more immediate metric than current measurement of AD biomarkers using PET scans, cerebral fluid testing, or both. Lower-cost Generic EpiPen®
A generic version of EpiPen® auto-injected epinephrine is being marketed for about $110 for two pens. Called Adrenaclick®, the product reportedly has the same active ingredient as the much more expensive original, which costs $600 for two pens. To prescribe the generic, health care providers can write “epinephrine auto-injector” to ensure receipt of the lowest-priced product. (Shots, NPR, August 16, 2018)

Explanation of disciplinary language and actions

“Effective date of decision” — Example: “March 14, 2012” at the bottom of the summary means the date the disciplinary decision goes into operation.

“Gross negligence” — An extreme deviation or departure from the standard of care.

“Incompetence” — Lack of knowledge or skills in discharging professional obligations.

“Judicial review pending” — The disciplinary decision is being challenged through the court system, i.e., Superior Court, Court of Appeal, or State Supreme Court. The discipline is currently in effect.

“Probationary License” — A conditional license issued to an applicant with probationary terms and conditions. This is done when cause exists to deny the license application, but limitations can be put in place to protect the public.

“Public Letter of Reprimand” — A lesser form of discipline that can be negotiated after or in lieu of the filing of formal charges. The reprimand may include educational and clinical training requirements.

“Revoked” — The right to practice is ended due to disciplinary action. The license is invalidated, voided, annulled, or rescinded.

“Revoked, stayed, 5 years’ probation with terms and conditions, including 60 days suspension” — “Stayed” means the revocation is postponed. Professional practice may continue so long as the licensee complies with specified probationary terms and conditions which, in this example, includes 60 days of actual suspension from practice. Violation of any term of probation may result in the revocation that was postponed.

“Stipulated Decision or Settlement” — A form of plea bargaining. The case is formally negotiated and settled prior to hearing.

“Surrender” — To resolve a disciplinary action, the licensee has given up his or her license — subject to acceptance by the Board.

“Suspension from practice” — The licensee is prohibited from practicing for a specific period of time.
